Glacier Leaf Set

Inspiration

The unique shape of the Glacier leaf gives it a delicate beauty that can be compared to no other. This intricately designed leaf consists of a vast network of veins supplying water, nutrients and food to other parts of the plant, essential for its survival. The leaf also helps the plant absorb vital light from its surroundings, in the form of photosynthesis, allowing the plant to create new and healthful energy.

As energy flows through the Glacier leaf's veins, it connects each part of the plant to each other, bearing a sense of peace and happiness and restoring Mother Nature's will.

And yet, though the land is gripped with cold, there is still a timeless beauty to be seen: in the shimmer of fresh snow in sunlight, the glitter of icicles on the end of a branch, or the delicate tracks upon the landscape of creatures born to revel in a winter wonderland.

JEWELLERY CARE TIPS

Exclusively available from

QNET

General Guidelines

- After wearing, wipe your jewellery with a soft cloth.
- Put on your jewellery last, after cosmetics, perfume, hairspray and other chemical substances that can be corrosive.
- Store your jewellery pieces separately, in a jewellery box or in jewellery pouches, to avoid scratching.
- Be sure to observe the special cautions listed here with regards to caring for your silver jewellery.

Silver Jewellery

- Use a mild cleaner without bleaching agents or ammonia.
- Soak the items in a very warm solution of water and detergent, then rinse. A gentle brushing, such as with a soft toothbrush, can be used to loosen stubborn dirt. Don't soak sterling silver for too long, as it can change some oxidised finishes.
- Avoid using anything with abrasives or bleach. Both will damage silver. Don't use toothpaste, scouring powder, or creamy opaque cleaners, as these will often contain abrasives.

CAUTION:

- Some materials and gemstones are especially vulnerable to damage from ammonia or any hot solution – turquoise, peridot, pearls, malachite, jet, coral and mother of pearl, for example.

“Combining my own love for our natural heritage with my appreciation for the fine things in life, this collection is designed to be simple yet elegant, and will add a distinctive touch to the wearer’s sense of style. I know it will connect with the hearts and souls of discerning women around the world.”

– Datin Umayal

A portion of the earnings from the sale of the Umayal Collection will be donated to RYTHM Foundation, for further use in its charity work across the globe, giving help to those who need it most.
